While the House passed the rate bill by a vote that was practically unanimous, the President never by one single word indicated that he regented it as a non-partisan measure. The bill has been in the Benials for weeks, with a Democrat, Sonator Tilliman, in control of the measure on the floor of the Senate. There have been plenty of opportunities for the President to have indicated that the bill should not be regarded as Republican or Democratic. But he never availed himself of any of them until he came to realize that which the country had seen for months—that he could not get his bill through without the aid of the Democratic senators.

for months—that no count income in the Democratic senators.

Then he began sending for senators from the Democratle side and urging them to support the bill, with an amendment framed at the White House, providing for a liberal review power lodged in the courts. Quite naturally, Democrats who are not inclined to be flattered by invitations to discus public questions with the President—and there are some—do not like the idea of helping Mr. Roose-veit put through legislation on his solicitation, made only after he had realized that he could not get along without them. But there are Democrats who are not invulnerable to the insidious flattery which the present Executive knows so well how to administer. These want the Democrats of the Senate to stand with the President and vote for the bill, amended as he directs. This, too, after he had tried for so long to have the bill passed without Democratic help, and after he had declared on every possible to the base he willing to gehad declared on every possible that he was not willing to ac-amendments whatever to the Hepburn bill.

Much Objection.

In the first place, it is believed by many Democrats as well as Republicans, that the bill will not be strengthened with the courts, when the question of constitutionality is raised, by the addition of an amendment giving the addition of an amendment giving the specific right of court review. It is claimed that that right will exist by implication if the bill contain not a word on the subject. This is the view of Senators Dolliver and Clapp, who are the leaders of the rate right for the Republicans. It is believed to be the view of the other wing of the Republicans, who are opposed, openly or otherwise, to all rate legislation. There are said to be two or three Democrats who insist that the bill will be declared unconstitutional unless the right of review by the courts be specifically given. In the second place, Democrats do not want the bill, if it is to be amended, by the Senate and House. There is a most decided sentiment against the continued and increasing disposition on the part of the President to influence legislation. It is more than likely that had he have taken loss part in efforts to induce the Congress to act along certain lines, more things he has asked would have been granted him. And it is probable that his activity in trying to shape the character of the rate bill will hurt it.

If the bill is defeated, that is, it is so amended as to render it ineffective in so far as the regulation of rates is concerned, the President will be more to blame than any other one man. And lenging his honesty on the subpect of rate legislation, though his views on the subject are known to have changed as many as four times since the convening of Congress.

She is said to be about a hundred years old, but does not know exactly what her age is. For many long years she has been totally blind from cataracts over the eyes. She was operated on here, and her sight restored to one eye. When she first saw the light she screamed with joy, and the hospital officials say that her delignt was touching.

The first objects that she was able to see were the white caps of the nurses, and they interested her immensely. Her sight came back very slowly at first, and began to cause her physicians some worry. But one morning a doctor walked into her room and Aunty Juty Ann exclaimed: "What a fine looking young white man." And from that on she has been able to see duite plainly. The nurses say that one hed to see Aunt Juty Anne to appreciate her.

Much Interest Taken in Bill Introduced By Alabama Congressman,

GETS REPUBLICAN SUPPORT

Jamestown Appropriation Bll to Be Reported Wednesday and Towne Will Speak. (From Our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 7 .- The possibility of the passage by Congress of a law providing separate cars for negroes riding on street rallways in the District of Columbia, is being very gen erally discussed in Washington. The probability of the enactment of a law of this character is another matter.

Representative Heflin, of Alabama, ir roduced a bill last week which provides that the street rallway companies shall provide cars for negroes, and cars to be modification of the bill, which will pro vide that cars may be divided by a par shall be seated and the negroes on the other. He would also accept, probably in amendment of his bill which would give to the conductors the authority to seat all passengers, provided that the races should be kept separate.

Republican Support. Republican Support.

"I have been surprised to find that Republicans from Northern and Western States are in favor of my bill." said Mr. Heflin to-day. "I have not ns yet kegun work for it, but have received assurances of support from Republicans of Ohio, New York and California, which, I think, does pretty well for start. I will have the solid Democratic support, and I am going to try to induce every Democratic member of the House to constitute himself a missionary, and bring Democratic member of the House to constitute himself a missionary, and bring one Republican to vote for the bill."

Mr. Heflin, continuing, said, he is simply being deluged with letters, commending his bill, and that every evening he has callers, white men and women, urging him to try to secure its enactment into law. Many stories of the insulting attitude of negroes toward white women in. Washington street cars, are being told him, but he is not going to make a fight of the character that would make these stories of special value to him. He has a lot of the same kind which represent incidents which have come under his own observation, but he will not der his own observation, but he will caim, conservative effort to have the bill reported favorably from the committee reported favorably from the committee on the District of Columbia to which it has been referred.

It is not at all probable that such a law will enacted at the present session, but those who are most familiar with the sentiment of Congerss, including the members from norther and western States, believe that the bill introduced by Representative Heflin marks the beginning of a crusade which will eventuate in the extension of the Jim Crowidea to the street cars of the District of Columbia.

Jamestown Exposition.

The Jamestown appropriation bill will be reported to the House next Wednesday. The various items of the bill, aggregating $1,480,000, have been agreed on by the Committee on Industrial Arts and Expositions, and the sub-committee is now engaged in shaping the bill for introduction in the House. The subcommittee is also considering the proposition to appropriate $40,000 for the greeintroduction in the House. The subcommittee is also considering the proposion to appropriate $40,000 for the erection of a wharf at Jamestown Island, and for enclosing the ruins and paying the

April 14th. There has been no notice of opposition to Mr. Jones thus far, and it is not anticipated that there will be an opposing candidate. It is understood that assurances have been given Representative Jones by the people of Newport News, Heypton, and the leaders generally of the counties of Elizabeth City, Warwick and York, which were added to the First District by the recent Legislature, that they will gladly support him for the nomination.

While Mr. Jones does not train with the dominant faction in State politics, some of his heartiest supporters for the nomination are men who do, so that a right against him would not be along the usual lines of an intra-party fight in Virginia. The Democratic leaders of the portion of the district newly added to the first apparently think that it would be very bad form to nominate another man to the House so soon after they had come into the district, and this, along with many other reasons, makes his renomination without opposition practically assured.

expenses of the Episcopal Church Convention to be held in this city during the Jamestown Exposition. The amount is to be raised among the members of the various congregations of this parish, and tentative efforts in this direction will be begun as soon as possible.

This appropriation will be larger by $2,000 than the amount raised for the convention held two years ago in Boston, Mass., and the convention, in view of the fact that it will meet here during the great exposition, will be on a much larger scale and with a more elaborate programme. There will be a representative delegation from the Church of England, and it is probable that the Bishop of London will be present. It is also expected that representative delegations from Chanada and Australia will attend. No committees have yelabeen appointed, as the convention is about eighteen montas off; but it is probable that some definite action will be taken as soon as the finance committee, comprising vestrymen from all the churches, report to the various congregations and then report back.

Death was found to a pis 1 shot, and the weapon was found by the side of the body. The supposition is that he committed suicide.

Returned Home.

A man in the neighborhod insisted that he saw Young near his home about two weeks after his disappearance in March, with his beard shaved off, which changed his whole appearance, but little credence was given to his statement. On last Monday week his grip was found in his own barn, showing conclusively that he had returned to his neighborhood. At the time of his disappearance there was great excitement in the county, and at first it citement in the county, and at first it was supposed he had been foully dealt

No trace of crime could be followed up nor any evidence of foul play be produced, and the community settled down to the conviction that he had gone off to join a young woman who left the neighborhood about ten days previous to his disappearance, and that they together had gone to Canada.

It is now thought that he did go off, but got disguisted with his escapade and returned home, but could not face the humiliation which awaited him, and took his own life.

Young was a married man, with a family, and a prosperous merchant and farmer,

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

INDEPENDENCE, VA., April 7.—The dead body of Calvin Young, a merchant of Rugby, was found about twentylmites west of this place. The body was found in the woods by his little son this morning near his late residence. It will be remembered that Young disappeared about two weeks ago from his store due night, leaving the store unlocked. His coat and vest was found on the store porch, coat badly torn, indicating that there had been a struggle. Blood was found on the store porch leading into the store and a chicken was found with its head out off behind the store. The rumor soon started that he had fled with a young Springer woman and had used the blood from the chicken to cause the belief that he had been murdered. It now appears that he was indeed murdered and that the chicken blood and clopment was used by the murderer to turn suspicion from himself.

The body was badly decomposed, and a pistol was found lying by him. Commonwealth's Autorney Parsons left this afternoon for Rugby, where an inquest will be held over the body to-morrow.

Fencing, Wrestling and Boxing Tournament at Cornell,

Tournament at Cornell.

CORNELL, N. Y., April 7.—A university fencing, wrestling and boxing meet for individual championships will be held at Cornell on Friday. May 4th. Although the weights will be the same as in an intercollegiate meet, a more liberal margin will be given, that strict training may not be required.

The Cornell wrestling team has elected C. C. Oderkirk captalin for next season. The Ithacians expect to be represented in the intercollegiate association next year. They were prevented from joining this year by the rule which requires a college to have had a team for at least two seasons. Dual wrestling bouts will be arranged at Cornell twice a month next year. Coach Frazer has been engaged.
